EMS Special Situations

June 16-17, 2018

State Preparedness Training Center

Course Description

EMS Special Situations provides training for emergency medical services (EMS) personnel to respond to requests for service involving circumstances often not encountered, including multiple patients, physical hazards, and difficult operating environments, among others. This training is designed to reinforce correct application of basic emergency medical skills while developing advanced application techniques and scene management through discussion, skill lanes, and scenario-based learning. Students will be introduced or reminded of the essential elements of Tactical Emergency Casualty Care (TECC) guidelines that may be necessary in indirect and potential direct threat situations. Additionally, students will be introduced to the concept of medical intelligence as part of a response. Finally, this course will provide students with the opportunities to sharpen basic skills, to practice skills rarely used, and to work in a coordinated fashion when responding with multiple units/agencies. This course is physically demanding: every student should be aware of this and consider self-exclusion if s/he has concerns about their physical condition or suffers from any health or other physical abnormality that may place them at risk.

Students will be expected to move training role players up and down stairways with multiple floor levels, walk for a significant distance, and maintain endurance levels through multiple scenario-based activities. Part of the course will be delivered outdoors (regardless of weather) and in the evening during low light conditions, so students should dress accordingly and also consider bringing flashlights.
