

Training Announcement:

Rescue Task Force for EMS

September 21-22, 2017

State Preparedness Training Center

Course Description

Recent events have spurred a national discussion on the survivability of victims and safety of first responders during active shooter events (ASEs) and other forms of aggressive deadly behavior (ADB). The Rescue Task Force (RTF) for EMS course provides EMS practitioners with tools and techniques to save civilian lives through the application of RTF and Tactical Emergency Casualty Care (TECC) principles.

Instructors will lead discussion on several topics, including a TECC overview, working within the Rescue Task Force model, and CCP management. Students will apply lessons learned in the classroom to skill lanes, including rescue task force movement, hemorrhage control and triage skills. The workshop will culminate in several scenario based activities that will incorporate rescue task force movement, TECC principles, warm zone operations, CCP management, life-saving medical interventions, and collaboration with law enforcement.

Tactical Emergency Casualty Care, Rescue Task Force Movement, Life-Saving Medical Interventions, Triage, and Scenario-Based Activities

Students will be expected to move training role players up and down stairways with multiple floor levels, walk for a significant distance, and maintain endurance levels through multiple scenario-based activities. Part of the course will be delivered outdoors (regardless of weather) and in the evening during low light conditions, so students should dress accordingly and also consider bringing flashlights.
