

Pete Owen

Protective Security Advisor, Syracuse, New York

Pete Owen is the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency's Protective Security Advisor in central New York. His job is to assist facility owners and government agencies to protect critical infrastructure and crowded places from terrorism, natural hazards, and cyber threats.

Pete served in the US Marine Corps for over twenty years in a variety of infantry, reconnaissance, and security assignments.

Pete was appointed in October 2008. He has also served as a Protective Security Advisor in San Diego and Norfolk, Virginia and as a Chemical Security Inspector in central New York.

Pete graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy. He holds master's degrees from the Marine Corps University in military studies and from University of Maryland University College in cyber security. He is an ASIS Certified Protection Professional® and an ISC2 Certified Information System Security Professional®.

